Elena Pekka Marquez

Renowned conductor and composer. It's amazing how far a cold-blooded being can get in the music world, but she acknowledges that she has benefited from the mentorship of great musicians before her.

Ada Lin

Ada played the violin before she could read. She made her debut at six months old, performing on a custom instrument made just for her paws. Critics have acclaimed her stylistic integrity and intuitive musicianship, with her trademark warm-and-fuzzy sound. She can make the instrument truly purr.

Program Notes

Symphony No. 7 in A major, Op. 92

Ludwig van Beethoven

Driven by an unrelenting rhythmic energy, Beethoven called this symphony one of his finest works. Its dance-like momentum carries from the opening movement through the celebrated Allegretto.

Violin Concerto in E minor, Op. 64

Felix Mendelssohn

Mendelssohn places the solo violin at the heart of the work from its first measure. The concerto is admired for its lyricism, clarity, and seamless dialogue between soloist and orchestra.
